What is London Dry Gin?

The term London Dry Gin is the most strict of the few distilled gin categories, and is a process designation. That means it doesn't technically mean a flavour because that's a subjective and pretty unenforceable standard, although the wider categorisation of gin requires a predominantly juniper-forward flavour. It's also NOT a geographical designation & NEVER has been. Instead, a series of EU regulations put in place in February 2008 dictates that a London dry gin must be produced exclusively by distilling ethyl alcohol of agricultural origin (normally grain). It also must also be distilled to an initial alcoholic strength of at least 96% ABV. This is only really possible in a column still, and achieving that strength means the basis for London dry gin is a neutral spirit. The law then states the spirit must be distilled again to at least 70% ABV "in the presence of juniperus communis L. and other botanicals." Any additional flavours must be sourced through the distillation of 'natural plant materials'. Following distillation, producers will then dilute the gin before bottling. London dry gin regulations state that the minimum strength it can be watered down to is 37.5% ABV and no artificial ingredients (flavouring or colourings) can be added. To meet the 'dry' designation, it cannot be sweetened in excess of 0.1 grams per litre with sweetening products, a trivial amount.

GIN: Distilled Gin

(a) Distilled gin is:

(i) a juniper-flavoured spirit drink produced exclusively by redistilling organoleptically suitable ethyl alcohol of agricultural origin of an appropriate quality with an initial alcoholic strength of at least 96 % vol. in stills traditionally used for gin, in the presence of juniper berries (Juniperus communis) and of other natural botanicals provided that the juniper taste is predominant, or (ii) the mixture of the product of such distillation and ethyl alcohol of agricultural origin with the same composition, purity and alcoholic strength; natural and/or nature-identical flavouring substances and/or flavouring preparations as specified in category 20(c) may also be used to flavour distilled gin.

(b) The minimum alcoholic strength by volume of distilled gin shall be 37.5 %.

(c) Gin obtained simply by adding essences or flavourings to ethyl alcohol of agricultural origin is not distilled gin.

GIN: Flavoured

'Flavoured gin' is a term that has become more well-known in recent years thanks to spirits that are pushing the boundaries of what a traditional gin is - by adding new aromatics and flavours that are more dominat than the juniper. A gin is usually classed as a 'flavoured gin' when the flavours are added after distillation. The difference between a flavoured gin & a flavoured vodka used to be that gin must use natural flavouring and vodka can use anything ie toffee or candyfloss.

GIN: Old Tom & Genever

OLD TOM - Old Tom style gin is the precusor to London Dry. Popular during the 18th Century it is sweeter to mask the residual taste of the badly made distillates before the column still came along to enable a much purer and higher strengthh base spirit.

GENEVER - The Dutch national drink & has been since the 16th Century. Genever is the Dutch word for Juniper. Traditionally made with Maltwine (triple distilate of corn, wheat & rye) makes it much more whisky like than the Gins we are used to in UK. Possibly brought to England by William of Orange in 1688 when he took the throne from James II

GIN: Navy Strength & Strong

Technically, all gin with more than 57.15% alcohol is a navy strength gin. The reason for the high alcohol content is a very practical one. Both gin and rum were stored in wooden barrels together with the gunpowder below deck on board Royal Navyy ships. it was therefore very common for the ships to be rocked around by waves and the barrels would sometimes smash and the gunpowder would get wet. With a weaker spirit the gunpowder would struggle to ignite due to the high proportion of water. Therefore the Navy asked for a high strength spirit so if the gunpowder did get wet then the gunpowder would still ignite. Ideal if you still own a boat and cannon today!

GIN: Cask Aged

As we used to transport all drink in wooden casks or barrels the gins would take on the colour of the wood if rested for over a few weeks. It also makes the taste richer & more complex and moden techniques can infuse very interesting flavours via the wood.
